

The Amazon rainforest, often called the "lungs of the Earth," produces 20% of the world's oxygen. It is home to millions of species of plants and animals, many of which are found nowhere else. Deforestation, largely driven by agriculture and logging, poses a serious threat to this vital ecosystem. Protecting the rainforest is essential for maintaining global biodiversity and combating climate change